Ben-Aharon's resignation

THE decision of Histadrut Secretary-General Vitzhak Ben-Aharon to resign did not come as a complete surprise to those who have been studying his actions and statements of late. For his growing dissatis-faction with what he terms "Government interference in the affairs of the Histadrut" has been clear for some time.

Mr. Ben-Aharon was known Mr. Ben-Aharon was known to be unhappy with the Settlement of Labour Disputes Law, though for reasons of party discipline he did not vote against it when it was brought up for decision in the Knesset. He is also opposed to the proposed retional pension scheme. national pension scheme.

Since his appointment, Mr. Ben-Aharon has sought ways to improve the image of the Histadrut, especially in the eyes of the rank and file who had begun to doubt that the Labour Federation represented their true interests. Many members felt that the legacy which Ben-Aharon inherited served the general aims of the Government's economic policy, but not the bread and butter issues which concern

Responding to this, Mr. Ben-Aharon has displayed a willing-ness to voice sentiments not de-signed to please his colleagues the Labour Party leadership. He was well aware of whom he was offending and upon his re-signation said he knew who would drink champagne to celebrate the event.

There are those who believe that Mr. Ben-Aharon in fact wanted a showdown with the manufacturers over the claims of the canning industry work-ers. He felt this to be a good and convenient issue, persuaded that this industry, with its pro-fits in good order, could well afford to satisfy the workers' demands.

The manufacturers, on the other hand, feared the effects of such submission not only on the canning industry, but on other sectors as well and wanted above all to preserve the terms of the three per cent wage-framework agreement to which they and the Histadrut committed :hemselves earlier.

The Government, anxious to avoid such a showdown, used its legal prerogatives to prevent it, and Mr. Ben-Aharon took umbrage.

On the political level Mr. Ben-Aharon's act threatens the delicate balances inside the Labour Party whereby Ahdut Ha'avoda, Mr. Ben-Aharon's political do-micile, has established itself so firmly in the centre of Labour Party power. For Mr. Ben-Aharon's move is a direct chal-lenge to the Prime Minister and Mr. Sapir. And while many in Ahdut Ha'avoda, and in Mapam as well, undoubtedly sympathize with him, the step cannot be of comfort to Mr. Galili and Mr. Allon, torn by their Ahdut loyalty on the one hand and their political affinity to Mrs. Meir and Mr. Sapir on the other.

Reyond this, of course, there is the more fundamental issue of the relations between the Government and the Histadrut. It is the Government and not the Histadrut which can and must make general economic policy. And it must therefore be in a position to see it through, otherwise there could be no national planning and no coordination of effort. The difficulty of balancing this need with the need for a Labour Federation strong enough to protect labour interests and to protect labour confidence and maintain labour confidence, and prevent anarchy on the labour front, has long been recognized.

But Mr. Ben-Aharon, invoking the militant slogans and partiean posture of a by-gone era, would strike at the very arrangements which make a na-tional and coherent economic policy possible.

If therefore he sticks to his guns, it is difficult to see how his party's efforts to persuade him to rescind can be of use, for his price appears too high Certainly submission to his basic views would open a wholly new and uncertain chapter for Israel's economy.

Yet whatever one believes about his political posture. Mr. Ben-Aharon, if indeed he carries out his resignation, over a matter of policy as he once did while Transport Minister, is entitled to praise for this very act, so rare in the course of Israeli politics.

Opposition in Egypt apparently growing

A year after suppressing high-ranking political-opponents, the 19-month-old regime of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat continues to face opposition which has grown to the extent that it dares confront the government in the open. This is the major significance of Sadat's speech

as Ben-Aharon resigns post

By Mark Segal, Jerusalem Post Political Reporter The Labour Party leadership was meeting in Prime Minister Meir's office in Jerusalem last night to discuss Mr. Yitzhak Ben-Aharon's resignation as Histadrut Secretary-General earlier

Present in addition to Mrs. Meir and Mr. Ben-Aharon were Ministers Haim Bar-Lev, Haim Gvati, Ya'acov Shimshon Shapiro, Yosef Almogi, Yigal Allon and Shiomo Hillel; Messrs. Yehoshua Woschina and Yeruham Meshel, of the Histadrut; and Mesers. Gad Ya'acobi and Mo-she Carmel and Tel Aviv Mayor Yehoshua Rabinovich.

Mr. Ben-Aharon announced his resignation yesterday, first at a caucus meeting of the Labour-Mapam Alignment leadership of the Hista-drut and then at the Histadrut Central Committee session. He said the Government had no right to intervene in labour disputes, undermining Histadrut independence, and specifi-cally pinpointed the Government in-tervention which ended the threatened strike in the canning industry.

The Histadrut leadership immediately called upon him to retract his esignation, in accordance with a motion moved by deputy Histadrut Secretary-General Yeruham Meshel who is also Histadrut Labour Party whip.

This will have been the second time Mr. Ben-Aharon has resigned from high public office, having walked out the Transport Ministry in the late 1960s.

A GUEST OF GENERAL AMIN

NUMBER 10, Prince Charles Drive, is a large but unobtrusive villa set back from the road in a quiet suburb of Kampaia Usually there are just two soldiers on guard at the gate with a machine-gun propped inoffensively by a sentrybox. It is from this house - known as the Command Post — that General Idi Amin runs Uganda. Here, nearly 18 months ago, I first met General Amin after his military coup, and it was again at this villa last week that the General and I settled down to lunch and a twohour conversation which led eventually to my detention for some 50 hours and an extraordinary furore over a newspaper article which had . never been published.

The meeting, arranged by the General who wanted to meet a repre-sentative of "The Observer," which had printed several critical reports on Uganda, began auspiciously. This treatment, I think, was prob ably more of an oversight than a deliberate intention, as the Special Branch, harrassed by Amin, had little time to think of my comfort. When I complained the next day I was given food, a mattress and blankets. For 12 hours that day I was interrogated at Special Branch headquarters about my contacts and sources of information. At first I mentioned only the names of a few people whom I knew that the Governmen; would already be aware of; but it soon became obvious that the Special Branch had been watching my movements and noted all the people I had met.

Nerve-shattering weeks for Bundestag

BONN (Ofns). How, at the second time of ask-ing did the Bundestag come to shy at the fence of decision? For Chancelor Willy Brandt's coalition Government, composed of Social Democrats and a small group of Free time, the final vote in Democrats, the race-course was al-ways intimidating. The Government, plagued by Free Democrat defecons, has a majority which is never more than two and sometimes less. The Christian Democrat opposition, led by Rainer Barzel, was threatening to vote against ratification, and nobody could be entirely certain that with the aid of defectors Barzel Barzel knows only too well that something came loose. a defeat of the treaties would not only be an international disester, but a domestic liability to the Christian Democrats: opinion polls suggest that 71 per cent of the population expect a political crisis with Eastern Europe and Russia if ratification falls, and 72 per cent consider that the treaties will help to keep the peace. But his own rightwingers, and part of the Bavarian section of the party led by Franz-Josef Strauss, were determined either to block treaties or to insist on a declaration which would rob them of their central meaning: that West Germany accepts the Polish frontier and the existence as a State of

THE BOOK BEHIND THE OSCAR WINNER

1 Sica's film "The Garden of the Finzl-Contini" as the best foreign film of 1971 marks the climax of Giorgio Bassani's career as a novelist. The film, based on his novel by the same title, has met with immediate success in the United States and has left its mark on hundreds of thousands of viewers in that country, who, for the first time, came in contact with this outstanding novelist's fiction on the screen. Even though the novel has been translated into several languages, including Hebrew and English, from the original Italian, it had not enjoyed a massive circulation in the United States and was therefore not well known by the average American reader. This, however, was not the case in Italy, where the noacclaim by the reading public. Since then it has already seen its tenth reprinting.

The Great Lakes are at last to be cleaned up. An agreement signed in Canada by President Nixon commits Canada and the U.S. to spend $3,500m. over five years de-polluting the immense lakes — Lake Erie is twice the size of Jamaica and Lake Ontario is twice the size of Cyprus. In a few years, reports Gemini News Service, game fish could be back in Lake Erie.

To spur them on, the Canadian federal government and the pro-vince of Ontario signed a supporting agreement last August to spend $2.i0 million on the most damaged area, the two Lower Great Lakes and part of the St. Lawrence River.

These two lakes are immense by themselves. Lake Erie has a surface area twice the size of Jamaica, Lake Ontario is twice the size of Cyprus. The drainage basin of either them is bigger than the area of Ireland or Sierra Leone. More than 12 million people live around

At first, the U.S. took the same path of pressing manufacturers to cut the phosphates in detergents to the minimum necessary to do heavy-duty cleaning and to switch to NTA beyond that. Then the Surgeon-Gen-eral put his weight behind fears

NEW BATTLE LOOMS OVER FUTURE OF PICCADILLY

By LAUBENCE MARKS

LONDON (Ofns). bolic centre of the metropolis, is the sixth in 13 years and it has been received with pretty much the sion as the previous five.

You cannot please everybody, of course. But the trouble is that most people are confused about whether they want the Circus to be an efficient junction of freeways or a place to loiter in. The planners, hovering maternally over their floodit toy skyscrapers and their press-button, three-dimensional working models, now on public exhibition, may be feeling that the very concept of the city centre has become unplannable for the time being, especially one with such an accretion of tradition and sentiments as Piccadilly Circus.

The Circus stands at the junction of Piccadilly and Regent Street, both part of the West End shopping area, and Shaftesbury Ave-bue and the Haymarket, part of the theatre and cinema district. Piccadilly itself gets its unusual name from the pickadils, a 17th-century stiff collar, once made and sold

Nothing to be proud of

Not that the Circus is anything to be proud of now, Intended as the hub of John Nash's magnificent townscape parade, linking two royal estates (St. Jame's Park and Regent's Park), it was the only bit of that early 19th-century comprehensive development never carried out as George IV's architect design-

Years of indecision have afflicted it with a rash of honky-tonk establishmeris - hamburger joints, a strip club, a pin-table saloon — fronting the decayed office blocks at its east end and creeping westwards towards the Victorian rococco of the Criterion Theatre (condemned by the new plan amid wailing from the conservationists) and the imperial grandeur of the buildings leading on to Regent Street and Piccadilly itself.

"Little more than a down-atheel, neon-lit slum," was how it was described by the chairman of Westminster City Council's plan-ning committee when he introduced the new proposals.

This seediness, however, attracts not only a floating summertime population of young tourists, students and hippies, who camp out on the traffic island around the statue of looks like being prolonged and fakt-Eros at its centre, but many more ly bloody. What may be at stake fastidious citizens who find even is not merely the future of a nacisms of the plan.

First, in order to attract the same mixture of sorrow and deri- £100 million of private capital needed for the development the Government has had to agree to allow the amount of office space on the site to be almost doubled, after tough bargaining with the developers. (The last plan, in 1968, fizzled out because they had not been allowed enough office space to make it a worth-while investment.) Even the 'Financial Times' has described it as "an office-developer's dream." This seems to contradict the Government's policy of encouraging the removal of offices out of central London to reduce the burden on the roads and the public transport sys-

Busy junction

Secondly, the already extremely busy road junction, now to be separated from the pedestrian walkways, will be able to carry half as much traffic again as the existing Circus. According to the axiom that urban traffic increases to fill the road-space available to it, a truth which has been demonstrated in almost every major city in the world, this is likely to worsen rather than improve the present congestion.

Thirdly, the character and scale of the new blocks seems inimical to the traditional appeal of an international landmark, Prof. Sir Colin Buchanan, one of Britain's leading theorists of town planning, remarked in his report to Whitehall on the first plan, in 1959: "Pic-cadulty attracts people from the ends of the earth as it is, and if comprehensive development is to take place then it should be to a standard that really justifies a journey from the ends of the earth."

For their part, the planners reply that another 1,200 office workers on the site will add only seven per cent to the load on the roads and the public transport system; that most of the extra road capacity the plan creates will suck traffic away from the surrounding congested areas, leaving them freer for shoppers and strollers; that there will be nearly four times as much space for pedestrians to circulate in as at present; and that the plan will "rejuvenate" the Circus.

Ha'aretz (non-party) accuses the International Comunittee of the Red Cross with "trying to blur the border between regular and irregular armies, and with a zealous desire to prove that it is marching with the times and not adhering to stiff definitions." The paper expostulates:

"Thereby, however, it is actively adding the terrorists, who direct their weapons against non-combatants."

Hatzofe (National Religious) Charges the Red Cross with "stulified formalistic pedantry."

She will, however, be transferred to the Orthopedics Department to examine a number of other complaints.

Divergence on peace borders

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter TEL AVIV. - The disparity of views in the Government on the nature of the country's peace borders was highlighted over the weekend by a "maximalist" speech Yitzhak Raphael, M.K., and by an "ultra-minimalist" statement from Tourism Minister Moshe Kol to an I.L.P. Executive meeting in Tel Aviv.

Dr. Raphael, speaking in Jeru-salem, declared that Jerusalem's security could be ensured only by a secure hinterland that would mpass Bethlehem, Hebron. Bethel and Jericho. He urged the Government not only to enlarge Kiryat Arba - the Jewish quarter of Hebron — but to settle thousands of Jewish families in Jericho as well.

At the other pole, Mr. Kol said the Independent Liberals favour handing over Gaza to King Hus-sein once peace is established Indeed, the LLP. chairman inveighed against "expansionist plans in settling Northern Sinai."

2 jailed for throwing hand grenades

Jerusalem Post Reporter

GAZA. - Two young terrorists from the Gaza Strip were sent to prison by a military tribunal here yesterday for throwing two grenades, neither of which exploded.

Abed Atiya Duda Sawid, 19, received a six-year jail term and an additional six-year suspended sentence. The prosecutor, Segen-Mish-ne Moshe Negbi, told the court 1956 Sinai Campain - which would that in 1968 the accused received a grenade from the now-imprisoned terrorist leader Mohammed Abu Nasser and was told to use it -

In a separate trial, Ahmed Salim Mohammed Labahin, 21, of the Burej refugee camp, was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment, plus five year's suspended, for throwing a grenade at an army truck in the camp at the end of 1970. This grenade, too, failed to explode.

The prosecutor, Segen-Mishne Yaron Rabinowitz, told the court that the grenade had been thrown in a congested area and might have cost the lives of local Arabs, as well as of Jewish soldiers, had it gone off.
